Pre-Speech / Program Presentation Preparation

- Ty's Pre-Program Questionnaire (PPQ) is the focal point around which he is able to customize his presentation to the client's specific needs. Here's how Ty uses it:
 - ✓ He visits the client web site and prints out relevant information.
 - ✓ Then Ty makes his first client call to discuss the PPQ, the client's expectations, and to design the first rough draft of slides.
 - ✓ Ty gets the meeting program agenda to see if key executives are speaking before him. If so, Ty asks for copies of the executives' speeches so he can build in key points/phrases into his program.
 - ✓ He then e-mails tentative program slides based on the first PPQ call and his research above.
 - ✓ Ty then makes his second client call to go over his slides and presentation.
 - ✓ Ty e-mails his handout to the client to distribute during his program to be used as a reference and continual learning tool after his presentation.
 - ✓ Ty conducts an on-site meeting (at the actual meeting or event location) with the client the evening before or morning of prior to his presentation for any current information on what's happening at the meeting.
 - ✓ For half-day or greater programs, Ty does field research by visiting the client's business location.
- Ty is always accessible; returns calls quickly, and is patient, even with demanding clients.
